

Legislative Update April 23, 2021

SECTION 1: GENERAL

It has been an interesting week at the Capitol to say the least! While most of the banking related bills have been put to rest one way or another, the last full week of the session has likely concluded but not without some fireworks on the respective chamber floors. Time gets limited, patience get short and tempers rise. Beautiful theatre if you're a goofball like me. And not surprising, they will not conclude their business tomorrow as I had alluded in last week's update. Looks like the new target is Wednesday which would leave just five days for the interim. Wednesday might be a stretch!

Governor Burgum signed some monumental bills late this week as well. First and foremost, this morning the governor signed HB 1175 in the Great Hall and ICBND happily participated in the signing ceremony. You're likely tired of hearing about this measure, but it provides liability protection for businesses from Covid-related claims and was a foundational issue for ICBND this session as directed by your ICBND Legislative Committee. I'm not a big pomp and circumstance guy, but what a great way to celebrate a spring Friday morning.

The governor also signed the bonding bill which is quite a significant step for our state. The $680 million bonding bill which was pared back significantly from original versions will provide $510 million for major flood control projects for Fargo and Minot which the state already committed to, $70 million for bridge and transportation infrastructure, $50 million for a revolving loan fund to support cities and counties, and another $50 million to replace Harris Hall at NDSU with an agricultural products development center.

More difficult I'm sure than the aforementioned approvals, the governor was also active this week with his veto pen. Governor Burgum vetoed the transgender sports bill and the bill that sought to prohibit elected officials and the state health officer from declaring face covering mandates. On Thursday afternoon, the House narrowly overrode both of these vetoes. Last night, the Senate overrode the mask mandate veto but fell short of overriding the transgender sports bill veto. As you know, it takes a two-thirds majority of both chambers to override gubernatorial vetoes in the state of North Dakota. I'm not going to touch the transgender sports bill (nor does it matter since the veto stands), but I will espouse an opinion on the other bill that limited authority of the governor, other elected officials and the state health officer as to mask mandates. I'm not sure anybody likes mandates, but I think there's a bigger discussion. I don't think anybody aspires to leadership positions in a state, a bank, a business, a church, or any formal or informal organization with the intent that you would willfully sign a document that eliminates at least some of your authority. Just not how leaders are built. I too would have vetoed the bill simply on that principal and I suspect many of you would have done the same if in his position. Again, not a banking bill but certainly one of interest that survives after both chambers overrode the veto.

And last but not least, a representative from District 26 proudly attended a bill signing ceremony and photo-op Monday morning that extended state health care benefits to families of fallen first responders. A noble and appropriate measure to say the least. Problem is she voted against the bill. Whoops! Moral to the story is do your homework, think on your own, and don't just blindly follow your mini-caucus. I will miss doing these updates. I hope they have been somewhat informative and occasionally comical.
